Peter buan, rounger brother of Mrs. Dowd, says he had been sent to the house to get a shawi which had been left behind. He whistled from the sidewalk to attract his sister's attention, and she threw the shawl out to him. The window-ledge is very low, and it would have been easy for a person to lose balance in the act of throwing anything out, and fall over the ledge into the street.

The woman's father says that beside the shawl there were found on the sidewalk a pair of suspenders belonging to bowd, a plece of lace which had been torn off the woman's nightdreas and a hammer. He declares that it nightoress and a hammer.
